EDITORIAL

THE NOT-SO-MAGIC MAGIC NUMBER

During recent years, the number 16 has become a magic number for too many high school students. To them it represents the age at which they can supposedly stop learning and start earning—as if one can ever stop learning! Great men, such as Dr. Albert Einstein, have devoted their whole lives to learning—learning for the sake of humanity. Learning is just another form of curiosity, although without it we would still be living in the dark ages. So if men can find a life's work starting with nothing but curiosity, why can't students find enough of interest to them to keep them in school after their 16th birthdays? Don't they know that without a high school diploma they have little chance of ever holding a responsible position, and of enjoying the feeling of trust and security that goes with it? Apparently not, since students continue to quit school in alarmingly large numbers as soon as they are 16.

But in Windsor Locks the situation isn't completely hopeless, for, during the past few years, many outside organizations, as well as the school itself, have contrived to provide the interest needed to keep students in school in the form of clubs, contests, and other activities. To mention just a few, there is the Northern Connecticut Science Fair, sponsored by the Hartford Times. This fair gives scientifically-minded pupils a chance to compete for prizes with other pupils from neighboring towns and counties. The two top exhibitors are sent to the National Science Fair, held in Los Angeles this year. The Veterans of Foreign Wars' Oratorical Contest gives those interested in public speaking an opportunity to demonstrate their form and, in addition, their ability to do research. There are also numerous essay contests sponsored by the Veterans of Foreign Wars, the American Legion, the Fire Department, and other organizations.

Moreover, the school itself just last year initiated a club program under which students possessing common interests may gather together for meetings during school time. With all these activities the student should no longer waver between staying in school and quitting, but enjoy himself to such an extent that he will not even think of "retiring." It is even possible that between club meetings, extra projects, and contests he may have a few spare moments in which he will have nothing to do but soak up some of the wisdom poured forth most generously by our excellent faculty. Thus in the light of this greater knowledge he may recognize the true value of his schooling and help to make 16 a not-so-magic magic number.

FAREWELL SONG
OF THE CLASS OF 1957

Melody: "From the First Hello to the Last Good-bye"

Words by the Song Committee

From our first hellos to our last good-byes,
It's been awfully nice to be here,
So excuse our parting sighs.
Now we'll go our ways, through the coming days.
All the things we've done have been so much fun,
And here our memory stays,
From our first hellos to our last good-byes.

As the years go by, our ambitions high,
The future years will be bright and gay.
A wonderful life we'll have,
From our first hellos to our last good-byes.

Class Motto: He who labors conquers.

GRADUATION NIGHT PROGRAM

OPPORTUNITIES FOR SUCCESS IN HIGH SCHOOL

Members of the Board of Education, Teachers, Parents, and Friends: On behalf of the Class of 1957, I wish to welcome you to the last exercises held by this class. Tonight is a turning point in our lives. After tonight each of us will go his separate way; some will continue with their education, others will go into business or industry, and still others will go into the armed services of our country. But no matter what path each of us follows, our success will depend a great deal on the opportunities we grasped here in Windsor Locks High School.

Each one of us has had four years of what might be called specialized training. We chose the course of subjects most helpful to us in preparation for our future goals. Our school offered the courses needed, and it was up to us to do our best. For four years we studied and learned, and after tonight we will put this knowledge to use, no matter what our goals.

But a high school offers more than courses of study. The opening of this large new school brought many additional experiences and opportunities unknown in the old high school. These opportunities were opened to us so that we might gain in meeting responsibility, develop initiative and sportsmanship, and better recognize and utilize our gifts of personality and intellect. Activities like the National Honor Society and the Student Council are carried on by the students with the help of their advisors, but the success of such activities depends upon the students.

This, of course, is true of all aspects of high school life. The school can offer the best in teachers, books, curriculum, and physical plant, but the success of the whole rests for the most part upon the wholehearted endeavor of the students. The student who gains most from opportunity is the one who has given most.

Tonight as we look back on our four years in Windsor Locks High School, we remember the work done in the classrooms and out, the good times we have had, and the friends we have made. We have tried to work hard to reach this point. After tonight we shall know better just how hard we did work.

Therefore, we should like to address a few words to the under-classmen who still have opportunities in high school before them. We hope that they will realize it is never too late, or too early, to start preparation for success. We wish them to remember that tomorrow will be the result of today; there may be luck in gaining opportunity, but there is more than luck to making it one's own. To them we say: Set your goal now and remember that success comes only with diligence on your part.

ELIZABETH ANDERSON '57

PERSEVERANCE—AN ESSENTIAL QUALITY FOR SUCCESS

In looking back over the years through which we worked to attain the goal reached today, we discover that perseverance was a basic weapon in our battle. Through perseverance the United States has become the major country it is today, and through perseverance we, the class of 1957, hope to attain individual success.

Perseverance is defined as "steady persistence in a course of action" and "suggests activity maintained in spite of difficulties." Plutarch picturesquely suggested that "water continually dripping will wear hard rocks hollow." How have we learned to persevere? How can we continue to apply ourselves unceasingly to our tasks? There are many motives for perseverance. One needs only to discover which motive or combination of motives will serve to keep him doing his best work, and he has solved this problem of persevering.

Perhaps the urge most natural to all of us is the desire to do something just a little bit better than anyone else. This competitive spirit, even though not consciously recognized, may well be at least partially responsible for motivating the individual to put his very best efforts into his work. We consciously appeal to it whenever we say, "I know I can do a better job than that."

Or perhaps our parents or other individuals have fostered in us a desire to do our best, no matter what the task. Once motivated, we have continued this pattern and have reaped benefits and rewards, thus making it easier to keep on in like manner for the rest of our lives.

Some of us may have ambitions for financial gain and added power which can be attained only through our being among the best in the field. These are powerful motives, especially for those who are self-supervised. They are working for us whenever we consider the tangible rewards we hope to win through sustained effort. Without such incentive, the entire economic system of our country would collapse.

Desire for praise can also be a strong motive for exceptional accomplishment. Surely it is one with which every housewife must be familiar. It may well be the only motive that influences those whose work schedule is difficult, but who receive no direct monetary reward for their exertions. All of us must at some time or other be spurred on to greater heights by the thought that someone will be pleased with our efforts.

Then, too, there are those who have a pure creative urge—a desire to produce from nothing, something that is grand in appearance and full of splendor—or a compelling urge to create purely for the sake of creating. The act of creating in itself gives pleasure. This is surely true of many artists among us.

But whatever our motives have been and may be, we are aware that perseverance is essential to success. We have learned that we must drive ourselves to the limit. The thought of attaining our ultimate goal sustains us. After completing one task and reaping the rewards for which we have worked, we can start afresh toward a new goal.

FRANCIS PEROTTI '57

COOPERATION, THE KEY TO SUCCESS

Tonight you are witnessing one of our rewards—graduation from high school. To achieve this goal we have worked diligently from the first day we were taken by the hand to kindergarten. Whatever our next goal—college, business school, job, or service in the armed forces—we all have the same aim in life—success.

We may not seem fully aware of the true meaning of the word success. To the older generation, today's graduate may appear a money-minded youngster who thinks life's best will fall into his lap. Yet many college placement officers describe our generation as levelheaded. We realize, as did the numerous students who passed through these portals before us, that it is the conscientious, cooperative student who receives a diploma with honors. To him the gates of the wide world are open, and to him the gates of knowledge will never be closed.

Winston Churchill once stated that "The best is none too good for me." This statement carries the conviction of a man with a purpose. We too realize that we must aim for the best in everything we attempt, for "not failure, but low aim is crime." Thus we know that one of the most necessary prerequisites for success is cooperation. If we have this attribute and the knowledge which entitles us to a definite place, then others will see that we attain that place. We must accept the fact that we are "running for an office" every day of our lives; to do so we must be capable of cooperating with all types of people.

Cooperation is simply operating jointly with others. No one can live successfully without learning to work satisfactorily with those around him in school and business life, in social life, and in the home. Many people believe that it is necessary to live in constant apology for oneself or to identify completely with each group one meets. Many keep others in line through fear, dominating them and making them afraid to raise opposition. This is not cooperation. To influence people without pretense or fear, one must learn the basic human trends of thought and apply them to himself and particularly to others.

To be cooperative and to gain cooperation, one must remember the deep human desire to be noticed and accepted as a fellow human being. Fellow students, families, co-workers, employees, bosses—all desire and deserve notice; particularly deserving are children and teenagers. Cooperation is simple and easy, but it is a tested secret of success.

SUCCESS—NOT INHERITED, BUT ACHIEVED

In this modern world of ours, we are all anxious to find happiness and success. But success is not a simple thing to obtain. It cannot be inherited or passed down to us by someone else. Our Constitution gives us the right to the pursuit of happiness. This does not mean that all of us will be handed success on a silver platter, as some people who believe the world owes them a living may think. It means that we are free to strive toward our own individual goals by taking advantage of any opportunities that may occur.

It is difficult to say just what success is. Each individual has his own criterion. It may mean security—emotional, spiritual, or material security. Perhaps it is being respected or well-liked. Perhaps it is knowledge of a job well done. Whatever our idea of success may be, we cannot obtain it in a day or even a year. The time will never come when we can say, "Today I am a success," for very few people ever become successes overnight. Success is something we must strive for diligently and achieve gradually.

It seems today that too much attention is given to material security. The person who places this first on his list of things to be achieved has a very confused sense of values. The inheritance of money or a big house will certainly not make him a success. What is more, he cannot really appreciate this sort of security unless he has strived for and achieved it on his own. The really successful person is the one who works harder to make something of himself rather than for himself.

Success in friendship, too, must definitely be achieved. What person without friends could possibly be considered successful? People will not like and respect a person simply because they think well of his father. Every individual must prove to others, and to himself as well, that he is worthy of respect through his own deeds.

This year we members of the Class of 1957 have seen for ourselves that we must work for the things we want. Every year the Senior Class of Windsor Locks High School has made a trip to Washington, D. C. As soon as we became Freshmen, we seemed to take it for granted that in four years we, too, would go there. But when we became Seniors, we realized that we could not go just because it was custom—because the classes before us had gone. These previous classes had set certain standards, and we found that we were expected to live up to them. Only through working together could we accomplish this purpose; only through real effort on the part of everyone in the class could we make this trip a reality. As we go on to college or to jobs, we will find this principle to be a true one. We will get out of life only what we put into it.

In closing I wish to thank all those who have helped to give us our start in life—those who have helped us to recognize that we must give to receive. It is up to us. Now I bid farewell to my classmates and wish them the very best of everything in the years to come.

SCHOOL NEWS

In early September Windsor Locks High School opened its doors for the second time in the new building. Through these doors passed 35 Seniors, 69 Juniors, 64 Sophomores, and 121 Freshmen. Three teachers joined the faculty: Mrs. Alice Clack, Mathematics; Mr. John O'Brien, seventh grade; and Mrs. Edna Priest, seventh grade. On opening day the Principal, Mr. Elias Shapiro, gave the annual orientation program welcoming the students back for another year of study. At the end of this month the Seniors held their annual Magazine Sale to raise funds for the Washington trip.

In November the Cheerleaders opened the basketball season with a pep rally in the new spacious gym. Also during this month the Freshmen Social and the Election Day Food Sale held by the Senior Class were successful activities.

December was an important month for the honor students, who were inducted into the newly-formed Leander Jackson Chapter of the National Honor Society. Sponsors of this society are Mrs. Josephine Oates and Miss Helene Leary. Also held during this month was the annual carol sing of the High School Glee Club.

January brought a talent show presented by grades 7 and 8. A musical instrument demonstration program was presented by a Mr. John Tirkot.

The month of February witnessed the first one-act play ever presented by the newly formed WILLOHI Dramatic Club. The name of the production was LAST NIGHT'S PAPER. The audience was very enthusiastic, and the play was a complete success. In another assembly students of the University of Connecticut presented a program called "The Student's View of the University of Connecticut."

April was a month full of activities. The Senior Class Food Sale and the Senior Class Play helped to finance the Seniors annual trip to Washington, enjoyed at the end of this month. The play, entitled THE BABYSITTER, was particularly enjoyable. The Sophomore Social, held late in the month, was a gay record hop.

In May another one-act play entitled CALL IT A DAY was presented by the WILLOHI Dramatic Club. Also, a film on highway safety was shown by the Connecticut State Police. An outstanding event of the month was the annual Junior Prom which this year was held in the new gymnasium for the first time. On Friday, May 10, 1957, the annual Career Day was held at the high school. Representatives from Connecticut General, Hamilton Aircraft, Trinity College, Hartford Hospital, Ward School of Electronics and G. Fox and Company spoke about opportunities in their fields. During the refreshment hour, representatives of various branches of the armed services talked informally with the students.

On June 14 the Seniors held their annual Class Night exercises and on June 20, graduation exercises. On the morning of June 21, Senior Assembly ended the school year of 1956-1957.

BASKETBALL

Early in November Coach Al Shapiro held his first practice sessions. The team was composed of several lettermen—Russ Jubrey, Charles Simonetta, and Charles Sidway—plus Raymond Marconi, William Wegrzyniak, Robert Wichniewicz, and a fine bench consisting of Robert Zace, James Fitzpatrick, Nelson Parmelee, and Herbert Staiger. The team successfully finished an undefeated season. In these eighteen games the LOCKTOWNERS, a very well balanced team, went through their opposition very easily. Highlighting these games was one in particular; in this, the RAIDERS scored eighty points against Suffield. The team also played exceptionally well against Bloomfield in two games.

The RAIDERS' Russ Jubrey, a good all-around player, in the regular season scored 332 points and captured many rebounds. Other members of the team also contributed many points during the season. Charles Sidway followed with 191, Charles Simonetta with 149, William Wegrzyniak with 136, Robert Wichniewicz with 101, and Raymond Marconi with 83.

The RAIDERS were considered a fine scoring team as well as the best defensive team in the league and possibly in the state also.

Entering the tournament, the RAIDERS defeated Litchfield, Thomaston, and Morgan. As a result of poor shooting, the LOCKTOWNERS bowed to New Canaan.

BASKETBALL TEAM

BASEBALL

Hampered by bad weather, the team had little pre-season practice, but there were several lettermen returning to take over key positions—Charles Sidway, Russ Jubrey, Charles Simonetta, James Fitzpatrick, Herbert Staiger, and Robert Lee. Rounding out the team were Raymond Carlson, Donald Poulin, Peter Lingua, and Robert Vaitukaitis. Games were scheduled with Canton, Suffield, Bloomfield, East Hampton, Portland, Bacon Academy, Berlin and Kingswood.
