*Juniors — Class
Of '69*

THE OFFICERS OF THE CLASS OF '69: Vincent Colapietro, President; Elizabeth Colli, Vice-President; Gloria Nolan, Secretary; Sandra Combs, Treasurer.

All year we heard, saw, and smelled construction.

T. Luscinskas engages in a major, if unpopular, pastime of juniors—homework.

Sophomores — Class Of '70

CLASS OFFICERS: James Meehan, President; John Fraher, Vice-President; Linda Mac, Secretary; Cynthia Yorio, Treasurer.

Sophomore "thespians" stage one of the scenes from Julius Caesar as the culmination of a detailed study of the play for English II.

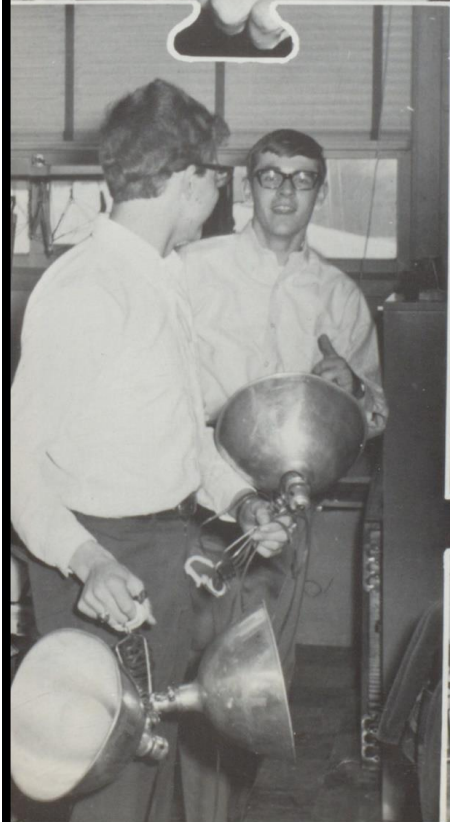

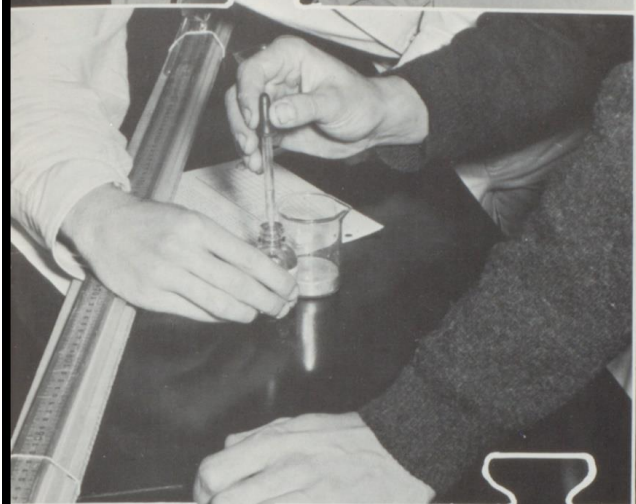

The first days of high school are often perplexing. This sophomore consults his schedule to determine the circuitous routes to his various classes.

Homework occupies much of a sophomore's time. Algebra, for example, requires the detailed preparation of problems, graphs, and proofs.

After the first quarter mile the pace steadies, and Captain Dan Heneghan outdistances his nearest competitor to take the lead.

Co-captain Greg Hamley exerts extra effort to maintain speed while climbing a hill.

For Co-captain Brian Savilonis, crossing the finish line means an end to the physical exertion required in long distance running.

Two and a half miles of running on a cold, muddy day end in exhaustion.

But the knowledge that victory has been achieved gives a feeling of satisfaction which overcomes fatigue.
